AN ENORMOUS CATCH OF FISH.

Talk about your fish stories, here's a fish story "as is a fish story" and those got around 500 barrels of "yellow fin who are not disposed to accept the facts" fished or landed them and will address S. H. Snuggins, care Lynch, setting them safely on the market. It's & Co., Fulton Market, who will give all lots more than the price to go out and catch a fish weighing with rod and reel and the largest catch of blue fish ever made and is destined to remain a record-breaker for a long time to come.

The catch was made at Argus Inlet, south of Roanoke Island, in 1884. Seven thousand boxes were caught of 250 lbs. to the box, a total of 1,750,000 pounds.

Men could not be had in sufficient numbers to dress and pack and the supply of ice being limited 5,000 boxes or over a million pounds went to waste. The fish were caught almost simultaneously by a large fleet of local fishermen using gill nets. The fish would run generally from 8 to 10 pounds.

They were shipped to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and a few to Norfolk and thence redistributed. This is given as a simple matter of fact and can be verified, and has been by a hundred men, any "horse laugh" given it doesn't go.

Another catch that isn't to be snickered at occurred on Virginia Beach in the fall of 1891. They were caught by Payne & James in a "pound net." They fish story "as is a fish story" and those got around 500 barrels of "yellow fin who are not disposed to accept the facts" fished or landed them and will address S. H.
